Sustainable Development

We operate with the firm conviction that Goldlake is not only a commercial enterprise with a purpose of generating profits for its shareholders, but that it is also a corporate citizen duty-bound to operate responsibly and with the fullest respect for the interests of all its stakeholders, whether our employees and investors or our neighbouring communities and host governments.

We also believe that it is important to demonstrate that we are part of a sustainable development movement committed to actions that will allow future generations to inherit a world that is abundant, diverse and has the ability to adapt to contemporary global challenges – such as climate change. We do this by investing in innovation and developing business models that actively include the communities surrounding our facilities and contributing to the development of these same communities.

Innovation is at the heart of our business and drives our decision of where and how we operate and with whom we work. We see innovation as an enabler of positive change to drive eco-efficiencies in our industrial process and create breakthroughs in performance through the introduction of clean technology. Our pioneering spirit, emphasis on technical innovation and respect for people and the environment makes sustainable development through mineral resources a reality in the communities and landscapes where we work.
